Tuberculosis, says the Anti-Tuber culosis, league, gosts the United States 500 million dollars a year.

The league arrives at this figure by computing that each year of the iverage person's life is worth $100 in the form of national wealth. This seems a low figure.

In Jefferson county there are approximately 120 sufferers from the great white plague. Organized means to combat its ravages have been taken by the county recently in authorizzing an anti-tuberculosis hospital. This is a step ahead. Years ago tuberculosis patients were left to die. Now it has been found that many, nearly all, can be saved by proper means.

Wholes le prices continue strong, which indicates that sellers have con-fidence in their ability to find lots of customers. Dun's Review in Jefferson countr reports average wholesale prices alnost exactly the same as last October. These prices average a fourth higher than the low point of 1921, Take a canvess of Port Arthur stores and you'll find them reflected there. #### WHY WAS RAINFALL NOT CLAIMED AN EMERGENCY WHEN IT OCCURRED?

Coincidentally with a deficit, the city months later declares an emergency to have existed in 1923 rainfall, necessitating the expenditure of large sums of money to care for it.

So the council passes a resolution making $10,500 in the contingent, or fund set aside for emergencies, available for expenditures in the general fund.

The emergency which council claims to have existed is brought to the attention for the first time when the citiy found its funds exhausted and faced the end of the figual year in the

In the second month of greatest rainfall, December, the city n following an avowed retrenchment policy discharges 80 men. In October, the month of smallest rainfall, 1.72 inches, the city expends $9,494,30.

In August, the month of the greatest rainfall of the year. when 9.71 inches of rain fell, according to the weather bureau's official figures, the city paid out the least money of any month in the year to take care of it, $701.24.

The 1923 rainfall figures, based on a five year average, was 16 per cent above normal. The city commission in its resolution declaring an emergency to exist says the rainfall was 31 per cent over normal.

In 1923 65,51 inches of rain fell. This cost the taxpayers about $31.347.74 to remove.

In 1919 65,26 inches of rain fell, according to weather bureau official figures. This cost $9,042.14 to remove. The year 1919 was a peak year from the standpoint of labor and materials cost, while 1923 these costs were appreciably lower.

These facts and figures, gathered from the weather bureau and a matter of record at the city hall, where they may be seen by any interested taxpayer, do not readily lend themselves to the theory that there has been an emergency.

The emergency which exists seems to be a city deficit. It would seem to be more than coincidence that caused the commission to take the $10.500 emergency fund, heretofore held inviolate, when a deficit existed without any announcement of such attention at the time when the emergency it claims to have existed was an actual fact.

Heretofore the contingent fund has been held to be a sacred fund, to be devoted to any sudden happenings which menaced life and limb and property. It has been considered that this was the intent of the writers of the city charter, to make available for immediate use of a sum of money to be devoted to meeting an emergency which, as one of them has stated it, "might occur and Investments over-night, such as a disastrous fire, or storm or high tide which might menace the lives and security of the people of Port Ar-

This has not been done. The contingent fund vanished to pay deficit created by the administration.

Your Money AT WORK

One main adventage of a stock or ommodity exclange hes in its ability to forecast confing events. Many times onnanies are able to weather adverse factors in various trades because the market wanted them.

Consider the position of the manutacturers of cotton goods, last year the corten market soared and futures in cotton were high, too,

This warned the dealer in cotton goods that there would probably be a shortage of cutton. Consequently he. in turn, was probably able to decrease the rate of consumption of cotton goods and to some extent stem the demand for cotton.

If there had been no exchange to varn of this napeding shortage it is possible that there would have been r period when all of the cotton would have been used up, and there would have been none available until the new crop educe in.

YOUR HEALTH

HEALTH OF THE MIND HEALTH of the mind and health of the body are bound together in a strong union. The healthy mind can do wonders for the physical body. It determines what intellectual feats can be entered into without undue exertion or serious strain upon our physical constitutions,

Mental hygiene is responsible for certein bodily conditions, which are outgrowth of anger, growliness, lack of ability to apply one's self to industrious habits and loss of respect for life's success,

If mental bygiene can determine one's emotional and intellectual capacines, we have a most interesting problem in the health of the physical body. If you allow certain occurrences to influence or upset your mental poiso producing worry, poor digestion, lack of proper sleep, irritability and false aleas in sizing up or judging others, you are starting your physical body down hill at a rapid pace. Loss of weight through these emotional tendencies will cause a great letup in your stength and working power and you are dangerously near the rocks of physical breakdown,

THE HEALTH VALUE OF SCANDAL

A LL sorts of scandalous exposures have been taking place in the nation. Names of high Tenown have been smirehed, newspaper headlines have become more and more larid and there has been a great scampering of politicians for the tail timber.

All this has usually been taken as food for pessimism. Many have exlaimed, "What is the country coming to when men in high office have been shown as betraying their trust? Does it not prove that our government is rotten? Does it not prove that democracy is a failure and that we are at the mercy of unserupulous wealth units?" It proves nothing of the kind.

On the contrary it proves that the country is healthy:

For it is a good deal better to have a boil break out on your neck than to have inward blood poisoning.

Conditions of graft and crookedness exist more or less in all countries, These who are familiar with conditions in European and Oriental nations know that bribery and grand and petty piltering are extant all the time. The difference between them and us is that here it breaks out quickly and there it remains covered.

These exposines that have recently taken place in the United States mean that there is no royal family, here are no national houses nor solemn dignities which must not be touched.

The searchlight of investigation is liable to fall on anybody, anywhere from a cabouet minister to a mayor. These exposures show that there is a sound public opinion which may at all times be successfully appealed to. They prove that we have a conscience, a lively and sensitive conscience,

They demonstrate that gumshoeing gentlemen cannot quiet the people with Back of all the present condition in senate and house of representative-popularity, if not the quickest, is for a politician to align himself to that conscience and appeal to it. Of recent scandals I have come out, not with despuir for the republic and its institutions but with a greater confidence of making money and will never than ever in the honesty of most public men and, above all, in the eventual righteousness of any decision that may be rendered by the great public. Crowds were turned awny at the First Christian church last night and standing room was not available in nce desiring to bear Rev. R. R. Yelderman's sermon on "The Ideal Young Man." A choir of forty men's voice replered music for the occasion with special numbers by J. H. Baxter, C. Y. Palmer, and M. Churchill. Girl. Letters Read

As my introductory to his sermon Rev. Yelderman read letters and extracts from letters received trom Port Arthur young women, giving their conceptions of an ideal young man. Practically every writer deeducated, home loving, physically trained, have a cheerful disposition. a elean upright moral character, must be a Christian, and taken all in all. must be a man's man.

"David was a man after God's own heart," declared Rev. Yelderman "and was considered an almost perfect man. In first Psalms he gives his description of an ideal man.

When selecting an ideal man bear in mind this one thing: He might be a modern Colinth in physical ability but a Tom Thumb in moral attribute and the real stuff of manhood. We must measure more than parts of his body in measuring an ideal young man. We cannuot measure a real man with a tape measure. We must measure his mind, his heart and his soul. In some respects the same characteristics must predominate in an ideal young man as in the ideal young woman, such as honesty, purity, nobility, education, and love of the beautiful in life."
